No Easy Walk To Freedom (2014, 92 min.) tells the story of the struggle to strike down section 377 of the Indian Penal Code. Enacted by the British in 1861, the law criminalizes “carnal intercourse against the order of nature”. 377 was the first of such laws that later spread throughout the colonial empire. Today this legacy remains responsible for half of the laws worldwide that criminalize people on the grounds of sexual orientation. A moving examination of the struggle to decriminalize homosexuality in contemporary India told through the voices of lawyers, activists and community leaders, No Easy Walk to Freedom documents the growth of queer organizing in India in the context of this historic challenge to a colonial-era law.

And Still We Rise (2015, 70 min.) is a compelling documentary on resistance to the Anti-Homosexual Act (AHA) in Uganda. The film follows Richard Lusimbo, researcher & documentation manager for Sexual Minorities Uganda (SMUG), as he documents the impact of the AHA. The story weaves together an analysis of the AHA with personal accounts of widespread repression following passage of the Act: media hate, clinic closures, arrests, human rights violations and mob violence - including the impact on the filmmakers-activists. Following the passage of AHA, Richard was 'outed' in the media. In a moving sequence, Richard travels to his hometown, where family and friends grapple with the news report.

Keynote Address ~ Nancy Nicol

Envisioning Global LGBT Human Rights: Challenges, Resilience and Hope

Presented by the Sexuality Studies Association in conjunction with Women's and Gender Studies et Recherches Féministes (WGSRF). Financial support for this session was provided by the Federation for the Humanities and Social Sciences the University of Calgary Women's Studies Program (Department of Philosophy).

Nancy Nicol (AMPD, York University) is an award-winning documentary filmmaker and scholar whose work examines human rights, social justice and struggles for social change. As principal investigator of Envisioning Global LGBT Human Rights (funded by SSHRC, 2011-2016) Nicol brought together an international, interdisciplinary research team and 31 community partners based in Africa, the Caribbean, India and Canada to undertake a project of research, participatory documentary, skills exchange, capacity enhancement and knowledge mobilization. Outcomes include reports, papers, resources and participatory videos. Documentaries directed by Nicol include: Sangini (2016, 45 min.) on a lesbian shelter in Delhi, And Still We Rise (2015, 70 min.) on resistance to the Anti-Homosexuality Act (AHA) in Uganda (co-directed with Richard Lusimbo, Sexual Minorities Uganda), and No Easy Walk To Freedom (2014, 91 min.) on the struggle to decriminalize homosexuality in India.

Envisioning Global LGBT Human Rights is a partnership of mutual learning, bringing together an international, interdisciplinary research team and 31 partners based in Africa, India, the Caribbean and Canada. The project was conceived of as a collaboration with partners that share a common legacy of British colonial laws against homosexuality, in countries where challenges to these laws are being actively pursued. Thus it was positioned to capture highly significant processes affecting global human rights and to share knowledge across a diverse international team. A large number of reports, resources and papers as well as over 50 participatory videos and feature-length documentaries have been created through the Envisioning project since 2012, and an Envisioning book is slated for publication later in 2016. Significantly, enduring relationships have been built between members of the team and between partner organizations. Principal investigator, Nancy Nicol, will share research findings and outcomes and discuss the methodologies, challenges and lessons of the Envisioning Global LGBT Human Rights project.

Envisioning emphasized the involvement of participants in defining and developing the research goals and the co-production of knowledge. The project was undertaken in a context of structural inequality and challenging times – the post 9/11 assault on civil liberties and religious right homo-bi-trans-phobia, while at the same time a significant growth of LGBT rights organizing. All Global South Envisioning partners were working, and continue to work, under conditions of criminalization and severe levels of abuse, rights violations and violence. Domestically, the project examined LGBT asylum issues in Canada, where partners were impacted by conservative policy changes and service cuts. Nicol will speak to these challenges and the processes and initiatives taken to address them, to fulfill the project's goals. Funded by a Social Sciences and Humanities Research Council of Canada, Community University Research Alliance grant, and the generous support of partners. (2011-2016)

PHYLLIS WAUGH

Phyllis Waugh has been actively involved in the Envisioning Global LGBT Human Rights research project since its inception in 2011. She is the Knowledge Mobilization Coordinator and a member of the Executive Team. She traveled to India for the filming of “No Easy Walk to Freedom,” as research assistant. Waugh brings community-based research experience to Envisioning, including as a former outreach worker with Rainbow Health Ontario and a former Chair of the Rainbow Health Network. Waugh has worked to promote awareness of LGBT issues in the labour movement as well as in Toronto’s largest hospital, University Health Network, where she worked for 8 years. At UHN she was a member of the Diversity Council and received a Champion of Diversity Award. She holds a Master of Fine Arts degree from York University.

JUNIC WOKURI

Junic Wokuri is a Registered Nurse by profession from Uganda. She came to Canada in 2014 fleeing persecution in her home country. She was an active member of the LGBTI community in Uganda from 2007 -2014 where she served on several boards and prior to coming to Canada; and she was the ED of Freedom and Roam Uganda, an LGBTI organization. Junic was a member of the Africa Research Team of Envisioning Global LGBT Human Rights, and contributed to the project from 2012-2016. She actively participated in the project's research, as well as filming, editing and narration of the documentary, And Still We Rise.

Junic currently works at the 519 community centre in the department of Education and Training and an active volunteer with new comer community support agencies including: Black Coalition for AIDS Prevention, Africans in Partnership Against AIDS, Access Alliance and Women's Health in Women's Hands. She is the recipient of the 2015 OFL Award of Excellence for Outstanding Workers' Rights Advances.

MORE ABOUT THE FILMS

No Easy Walk To Freedom (2014, 92 min.)

A moving examination of the struggle to decriminalize homosexuality in contemporary India told through the voices of lawyers, activists and community leaders, No Easy Walk to Freedom documents the growth of queer organizing in India in the context of this historic challenge to a colonial-era law. In 2001 Naz Foundation, an HIV/AIDS NGO in Delhi, filed a petition against 377 which resulted in a decision striking down section 377 in 2009 by the Delhi High Court; in a precedent-setting ruling celebrated by human rights and legal experts worldwide. Citing Nehru and Ambedkar, architects of the Indian constitution, the High Court upheld “constitutional morality” and dignity and equality over a colonial-era law. However on December 11, 2013, the Supreme Court set aside the 2009 verdict and upheld 377, effectively recriminalizing same-sex conduct between consenting adults in India. On February 2, 2016, the Supreme Court of India agreed to review its 2013 decision, reviving the battle for repeal of 377 once again. Chief Justice T.S. Thakur said that the curative petitions that challenged the 2013 ruling posed questions with “constitutional dimensions of importance,” and referred the case to a five-judge Constitution Bench. Participants in the film include: Anjali Gopalan, founder of Naz Foundation; Chief Justice Shah (retired); lawyers, Anand Grover, Alok Gupta and Arvind Narrain; queer activists, Gautam Bhan, Maya Sharma and Pramada Menon among many others; and historian, Saleem Kidwai.

And Still We Rise (2015, 70 min.)

And Still We Rise provides an analysis of intersecting domestic and international forces underlying this story including an in-depth look at resistance by civil society in Uganda, led by SMUG and the Civil Society Coalition on Human Rights and Constitutional Law. Nicholas Opiyo (ED Chapter Four Uganda) the lead lawyer in the constitutional case against the AHA, gives an analysis of the Act in the context of the post 9/11 assault on civil liberties under the aging regime of president Museveni. Dr. Sylvia Tamale (Law, Makerere University) deconstructs the myth that ‘homosexuality is Un-African’, citing examples of same-sex practices and diverse gender expression across Africa. Dr. Frank Mugisha (ED, SMUG), Adrian Jjuuko (ED, Human Rights and Awareness Promotion Forum), Kasha Jacqueline (Freedom and Roam Uganda), Sam Ganafa (ED Spectrum Uganda) and others describe personal and organizational impacts. A story of courage and resilience, And Still We Rise was created by people in the midst of the struggle against the AHA in Uganda, and is an inspiring example of participatory documentary making.
